Kiran Desai first came to literary attention in 1997, when she was published in The New Yorker and Mirrorwork. Eight years later, in early 2006, The Inheritance of Loss was published, and it won the 2006 Booker Prize. The Inheritance of Loss is set partly in India and partly in the US. Desai describes it as a book that tries to capture what it means to live between East and West and what it means to be an immigrant. Her aim was to write about what happens when you take people from a poor country and place them in a wealthy one. She says that these are old themes that continue to be relevant in today's world, with the past informing the present and the present revealing the past.

43. According to the passage, Kiran Desai was not well known in the literary world until

- A) she wrote about the problems of immigrants
- B) she was awarded the 2006 Booker Prize
- C) The Inheritance of Loss was published in India
- D) her work came out in The New Yorker and Mirrorwork

Scientists say Ateronon, a natural drug made from tomatoes, may prevent heart disease and strokes. It contains lycopene, which apparently blocks the cholesterol that can lead to heart attacks. Early tests indicate it is highly effective. But Professor Peter Weissberg, an expert on heart health, cautions people to wait for any new drug to be clinically proven to offer benefits before taking it. And it will take several extra clinical trials to provide such evidence for Ateronon. For now, he advises heart disease patients to rely on prescribed drugs, and to eat fresh fruit and vegetables. Lycopene is in the skin of tomatoes, and it is what makes them red. Yet, in its natural form, it is poorly digested. Ateronon contains a refined form of it.

46. It can be concluded from the passage that Ateronon

- A) takes time to have any effect
- B) has been taken by Peter Weissberg
- C) makes the patient's skin turn red
- D) will be subjected to more tests
- E) doesn't interest heart disease patients

47. It is strongly implied in the passage that Peter Weissberg

- A) doesn't want people to start using Ateronon right away
- B) believes that Ateronon doesn't do anything against cholesterol
- C) isn't aware that lycopene is not very good in its natural form
- D) thinks Ateronon is no more effective than standard medication
- E) has a problem with cholesterol himself

48. It is stated in the passage that lycopene

- A) has prevented heart attacks
- B) can be obtained in sufficient amounts through fresh fruit and vegetables
- C) gives tomatoes their colour
- D) is quite easy to digest
- E) is not being consumed by the public at present

A tiny key has recently been sold for £90,000 in an auction. It once opened the binoculars store on the Titanic, but was not on the ship when it sailed from Southampton in 1912. As a result, the lookouts had to rely on just their regular eyesight. The Titanic sank with the loss of 1,522 lives after having hit an iceberg on its first ever public voyage. One of the lookouts on the Titanic at the time of the sinking later said that with the binoculars, the Titanic might have turned early enough to miss the iceberg. David Blair held the key during the short journey from Belfast, where the Titanic was built, to Southampton, where he was taken off the ship. Blair was disappointed at the time, and forgot to hand the key to his replacement as he left.

49. One point made in the passage is that, if the key had been on board,

- A) David Blair might have survived the crash
- B) the Titanic would probably have had a different fate
- C) fewer people would have died in the crash
- D) the Titanic wouldn't have sunk on the way to Southampton
- E) the passengers would have enjoyed the journey more

50. It is implied in the passage that David Blair

- A) was the lookout who spoke to the inquiry
- B) had better eyesight than the other lookouts on the Titanic
- C) lived in Southampton
- D) has recently put a key up for sale
- E) was not on the Titanic when it sank

51. It is stated in the passage that Belfast was

- A) not a place that saw icebergs
- B) where David Blair had his home
- C) somewhere that David Blair was sad to leave
- D) where the passengers of the Titanic came from
- E) the place the Titanic was constructed in

Georg Brandes was a Danish critic. In 1871 he began a series of lectures, as a teacher, at the University of Copenhagen. In his lectures, Brandes called for writers to reject late Romanticism and produce works of realism. His criticism of European literature attracted attention outside Denmark. He gained a following in Denmark, yet he was opposed by traditionalists. When one professorship at his university became vacant in 1872, Brandes wasn't elected to it. But his suitability for it was so clear that no one else took the professorship, either. He moved to Berlin, but in 1883, returned to Denmark. His influence on the Scandinavian writers of the 1880s was strong, and a reaction, led by Holger Drachmann, against his realism, began in 1885.

52. It is understood from the passage that Holger Drachmann

- A) was a professor at the University of Copenhagen
- B) did not like the literary movement supported by Georg Brandes
- C) helped to prevent Georg Brandes from being made a professor
- D) first took an interest in literature in 1885
- E) was more famous outside Denmark than Georg Brandes

53. It can be understood from the passage that the literary criticism of Georg Brandes

- A) wasn't read by Holger Drachmann
- B) wasn't supported by anyone in Denmark
- C) was also followed abroad
- D) doesn't look at late Romanticism
- E) is more popular in Berlin than in Denmark

54. It is implied in the passage that in the year of

- A) 1872, a professorship remained empty at the University of Copenhagen
- B) 1885, Holger Drachmann learned that Brandes had returned to Denmark
- C) 1890, Georg Brandes had no influence on Scandinavian literature
- D) 1883, Brandes became a professor at the University of Copenhagen
- E) 1871, Brandes gave up writing in his previous literary style

Ro is a constructed language created by Edward Foster. In it, words are made by using a category system. For example, red is "bofoc", and yellow is "bofof". All words starting with "bofo-" signify colours. Foster published the first booklet about Ro in 1906. The publication of Ro periodicals was supported by such US sponsors as Melvil Dewey, who invented the classification system still widely found in libraries, and the nation's Vice President. Also, William W. Mills' monthly donation allowed Foster and his wife to devote their time to Ro. Several books about Ro by them came out over the years. Nonetheless, there is no evidence that Ro's creator persuaded anyone other than his wife to actually use the language.

55. We learn from the passage that Melvil Dewey

- A) was a printer of magazines
- B) was the Vice President of the US
- C) was able to understand the Ro language
- D) created something that remains in use
- E) got other people to sponsor Ro periodicals

56. It can be understood from the passage that Edward Foster

- A) didn't care whether other people used Ro or not
- B) helped to set up a classification system used in libraries
- C) and his wife were the only people who communicated in Ro
- D) got to know the Vice President of the US through Melvil Dewey
- E) wrote periodicals that are still on the shelves of a large number of libraries

57. It is stated in the passage that every

- A) word in the Ro language has the same beginning to it
- B) month William W. Mills gave money to Edward Foster
- C) type of colour is not represented in the Ro language
- D) book published in Ro was read by the Vice President of the US
- E) person who supported the Ro language failed to learn it

- A) She can't really expect my initial essay to be perfect, can she?
- B) What an impressive piece of work I've done!
- C) Would you mind checking this through for mistakes?
- D) Had you done this, it wouldn't be any better.
- E) My teacher is not going to like this, as it is full of problems.

70. Your brother is in the college football team. Last week, he played in the semi-finals for the regional cup, but his leg got broken. The doctor told him he wouldn't be able to play any more football this year. Today is the final, and you are with your brother, who is depressed, as he wants to still feel that he is part of the team. Wanting to cheer him up, you say:

- A) It's a shame that you're missing out on the most important game of the year.
- B) The others can't have forgotten you, as they wouldn't have got this far without you.
- C) I'm happy that I'm not playing, because I regard this sport as being a complete waste of time.
- D) If you thought more positively, you wouldn't have been excluded from this match.
- E) It'll be funny if another player breaks his leg in this match.

71. You have a friend who is always complaining about his apartment. Nevertheless, it is spacious, and in a really nice part of the city. Wanting him to stop complaining and make him realize how fortunate he is, you say to him:

- A) Many people would love to have a flat like yours.
- B) You're right, as the place you live in is too large.
- C) I feel lucky living where I do as well.
- D) I wish you could afford to hire a better apartment.
- E) You had better take a bigger apartment in a good neighbourhood.

72. Your friend has called you over to watch a film on DVD. You have seen it before, but you know that, if you tell her, she will be upset, as you can tell she wants to watch it for the first time with you. In the middle, she asks if you can guess what is going to happen next. As you don't want to spoil her watching, you say:

- A) I enjoy the first watching of a movie the most.
- B) I already know.
- C) I wish you'd chosen a different DVD.
- D) I hate it when you are unhappy.
- E) I have absolutely no idea.
